NOTE ON SOURCES

The original documents that have been included in this microfilm publication are from three sources: the National Security Council Files, Record Group #273, deposited at the National Archives and Records Administration, Washington, D.C.; the President's Secretary's Files, Subject File, NSC-Meetings, deposited at the Harry S Truman Library, Independence, Missouri; and the Eisenhower, Dwight D.: Papers as President of the United States (Ann Whitman File), 1953–1961, NSC Series, deposited at the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library, Abilene, Kansas. The minutes of meetings and associated documents that are reproduced in this publication are from the National Archives; the summaries of discussions are from the respective presidential library.

EDITORIAL NOTE

Under the National Security Act of 1947 and the Reorganization Plan of 1949, the composition and function of the National Security Council (NSC) are clearly and simply defined. Chaired by the president, the NSC consists of statutory members (the vice-president and the secretaries of state and defense), statutory advisers (the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the director of Central Intelligence), the assistant to the president for national security affairs, and professional staff members who are on temporary assignment from the armed forces, the CIA, and elsewhere in the government or who have been recruited from universities and think tanks. The statutory function of the NSC is to advise the president with respect to the integration of domestic, foreign, and military policies relating to national security.

However, the mere words by which the NSC was established (see Appendix I) do not begin to indicate how the NSC has evolved as a key—sometimes the key—foreign policy-making arm of the president under such strong-willed national security advisers as McGeorge Bundy, Henry Kissinger, and Zbigniew Brzezinski. For such an evaluation of the NSC's first four decades, an essential starting point is an examination of the many papers, memoranda, and directives generated by the NSC. Toward this end University Publications of America (UPA), for over a decade, has been committed to collecting and publishing all available NSC documents in two microfilm series: Documents of the National Security Council and Minutes of Meetings of the National Security Council.

UPA monitors the declassification and release of NSC materials, and collects those documents on an ongoing basis. Due to the fact that NSC documentation is reviewed for declassification only when researchers file Freedom of Information Act requests for specific documents or subjects, the complete files of the NSC for even the Truman and Eisenhower administrations will be held for many more years before they are released to the public. In addition, not all documents reviewed are declassified. Therefore, each new supplement fills in gaps in the paper trail of U.S. national security policy. Now, with the addition of over three thousand pages of formerly classified NSC papers in UPA's new Minutes of Meetings of the National Security Council: Second Supplement, researchers have conveniently available for the first time an inner history of American foreign policy in the postwar era in the form of all the NSC papers that have been released.

Minutes of Meetings of the National Security Council: Second Supplement contains three separate types of formerly classified materials: minutes of meetings, documents associated with such meetings, and summaries of discussions held during the meetings. This publication covers the administrations of presidents Truman and Eisenhower, during which period the NSC normally met on a regular weekly basis. The NSC met more frequently during times of foreign crisis and less frequently when the president was travelling, ill, or preoccupied with domestic issues. (In contrast to Truman and Eisenhower, presidents Kennedy and Johnson held few NSC meetings, relying less on the formally structured NSC and more on ad hoc committees to discuss national security policy.)

Descriptions of the three types of documentation included in this publication follow:

Minutes of Meetings

The NSC minutes of meetings are the official records used for referencing NSC meetings. The information recorded by the minutes includes the meeting number; the date, time, and location of the meeting; and NSC members and others present at the meeting. In addition, the minutes record the topics that were discussed at the meeting; indicate the presidential decisions that were made regarding those topics; and identify the official responsible for the implementation of such decisions.

Documents

The official meeting files of the National Security Council in Record Group #273 consist of the minutes of meetings and associated documentation. The latter consists of meeting agendas, memoranda submitted by the NSC staff to NSC members for briefing purposes, reports by various government departments and agencies, and follow-up memoranda to NSC members regarding decisions relating to topics discussed during the meetings.

Summaries of Discussions

Presidents Truman and Eisenhower assigned the National Security Council staff the task of preparing more detailed records of NSC meetings than were available in the official minutes of meetings. These more expansive reports were called summaries of discussions. The summaries were for the president's personal use, and only the president's copy can be located today. These summaries are not part of the official documentation kept by the National Security Council. They contain a lengthy record of each topic discussed during the meetings, identifying individual speakers, summarizing their comments, and often quoting them verbatim. An example of one such summary follows:

February 7, 1957

Discussion at the 312th meeting of the National Security Council, February 7, 1957.

1. (Discussion item) U.S. Policy toward Iran (NSC 5504, 5610, 5703; NSCA 1624).

Mr. Hollister said he thought it was his duty to call the Council's attention to a domestic political problem involving our aid programs to Iran. He said that he was referring to the savage attack by a Congressional subcommittee on the past administration of our aid programs in this country. The attack was largely unjustified, but nevertheless Mr. Hollister predicted that the situation would plague us when we came up to Congress with our future aid programs for Iran. Mr. Cutler also called attention to the highly critical article on the administration of our aid to Iran in past years in the current issue of the Reader's Digest.

The President replied philosophically that whatever we have done, good or bad in our assistance programs to Iran in the past, we can at least have the satisfaction that we saved Iran from Communism and kept it on our side against the Soviet Union. This should be cast in the teeth of the politicians who criticize our aid programs to Iran. Secretary Dulles commented that he had pointed out this very thing at a recent Congressional hearing. He nevertheless thought we ought to get somebody in Mr. Hollister's shop to write a vigorous reply to these criticisms of the Iranian program.

Description of Entries

The following is a sample entry from the Reel Index of this microform publication. For the convenience of the researcher, the various elements found in these entries are explained below.

On the far left side of the page is the frame number at which the material from a particular meeting begins. The number of the particular meeting is listed next, followed by the date, the type of material, and the total number of pages. Indented under this information, and numbered sequentially, are the items discussed at the meeting, represented exactly as they appear in the official minutes of meetings. When an NSC Policy Paper is discussed, the policy paper number is enclosed by parentheses at the end of the item description, as in item numbers 1 and 3. If a decision is made at the meeting on any part of an item, that decision is recorded as an NSC Action (NSCA). The NSC Action number is enclosed by parentheses at the end of the item description, as in item number 6. When only an NSC Policy Paper or other numbered document is listed as a numerical agenda item, the title/subject is included in brackets for the convenience of the researcher.

All NSC policy papers and actions that have been declassified to date can be found in UPA's Documents of the National Security Council series. UPA plans to publish additional supplements to both Minutes of Meetings of the National Security Council and Documents of the National Security Council as material becomes available.

Explanation of National Security Council Policy Papers and Actions

During the Truman and Eisenhower administrations, the NSC produced a series of formal policy papers whose purpose was to analyze current and potential national security issues and make policy recommendations to deal with those issues. These policy papers were prepared by the NSC staff and occasionally by members of the NSC in response to requests by the NSC to study specific issues. Each policy paper was assigned a number for reference purposes. When completed, policy papers were distributed to NSC members for study and comment. If the NSC decided to alter a policy paper, a revised draft of the paper would be produced and redistributed to NSC members for further study and comment. Each revised draft would be assigned the same number as the original paper, followed by a slant mark (/) and then the number of the revision. The decision whether or not to approve a policy paper was the president's; once approved, the paper became the official (and usually secret) policy of the United States government. If the same national security issue were reevaluated at a future date, a new number would be assigned to the ensuing policy paper.

The numbering system for policy papers underwent a change between the Truman and Eisenhower administrations. During the Truman administration (1945–1953), policy papers were assigned consecutive numbers beginning with #1. During the Eisenhower administrations (1953–1961), policy papers were assigned four-digit numbers; the first two digits identified the year the paper was begun, and the last two digits identified the sequence of the specific paper.

The National Security Council Actions constitute records of actions, directives, and decisions made by the NSC. Usually NSCAs were recorded at NSC meetings; occasionally, it was necessary to take an immediate action between meetings. All NSCAs were numbered consecutively as they were made.
