

THE DEFINITIVE RECORD OF THE DAY

“ALL THE NEWS THAT’S FIT TO PRINT”*

It may be known as “America’s newspaper” but for more than a century, The New York Times has commanded international readership. The world news and personal stories captured by this Pulitzer Prize-winning newspaper for more than 150 years are available online from ProQuest. So researchers anywhere can browse and search the digitized pages of this definitive record of the day.

ProQuest Historical Newspapers™ – The New York Times returns relevant results faster with an integrated index created by ProQuest’s expert editorial team. Researchers can move beyond key words to search for articles by subject, company, location, person, or creative work. Research outcomes are further enhanced through the addition of abstracts, detailed citation information, as well as topic headings for further exploration.

* The motto of The New York Times since 1897, coined by then owner/publisher Adolph Ochs in response to the sensationalist approach and sometimes inaccurate reporting adopted by competing newspapers.

“The New York Times historical database made it easy to do the basic research for a project which previously had seemed impractical to even attempt – I was able to complete in about eight hours what likely would have taken two-three months.”

– Professor of Political Science, Oakland University, US

From the digitized pages of The New York Times explore the:

- Arrival of immigrants to America’s shores
- Rise and fall of global financial markets
- Introduction of the mass-produced automobile, television, space travel, and medical innovations
- Causes and effects of the Civil War in the 1800s to the war on terrorism in this century
