

ProQuest Historical Newspapers: Chicago Tribune (1849-2010)

Cover-to-cover image based coverage of Chicago's dramatic history

The Chicago Tribune, known as the "The Trib" to Midwest natives, is best known for its prize-winning investigative and public service journalism providing historical coverage of people and events critical to the evolution of the Midwest and the United States.

As the largest newspaper in the Midwest, the Chicago Tribune is a critical source of local, regional and national primary source information and insights such as:

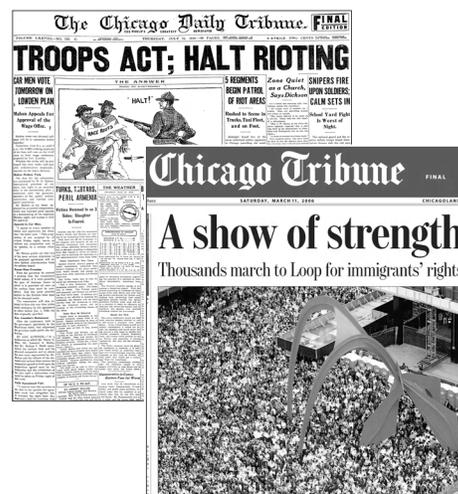

- The Great Fire of 1871
- Chicago's Jubilee in 1893 and 1909
- The Progressive Movement of the 1920's
- The works of Nobel Peace Prize-winning social reformer Jane Addams
- Expositions on the activities of mobsters like Al Capone
- Editorial cartoons from Pulitzer Prize-winning John T. McCutcheon's
- The city's long history of Democratic machine politics
- Immigration reform movements
- The election of President Barack Obama, former Illinois senator from Chicago

Curriculum Focus

- Architecture
- History
- Politics
- Development of Midwest
- Multidisciplinary
- Social Reform

WHY THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE?

- Primary source research across multiple perspectives. Over a century of local, regional, national and global coverage starts with the first publication and provides the first historical record of a person, place or event and a comprehensive record of how stories unfold – and continue to unfold – over years and decades.
- Cover-to-cover searchable access. Article level search term highlighting of featured articles, breaking stories, newspaper editorials, advertisements, cartoons, obituaries, birth records, marriage records, and classified ads.
- Advanced search capability for deeper research. Allowing users to search on five additional categories for more precise results including: person, organization/company, subject, location and creative work.
- User-friendly platform and search experience. Cross-searchable with all other content on the ProQuest platform for a broader scope of research insights across multifformat sources. Full-text and greyscale images are easily downloadable in PDF format and the platform provides easy-to-use tools for saving, sharing, and citing to help aid scholarly study from the novice user to an advanced researcher.

To learn more or contact us, visit

<https://www.proquest.com/products-services/pq-hist-news.html>

To talk to the sales department, contact us at 1-800-779-0137 or sales@proquest.com.

