ISSUING AGENCIES AND ORGANIZATIONS

Following are brief descriptions of federal government agencies, educational institutions, nongovernmental think tanks, and consulting corporations that issued papers included in this publication.

Combating Terrorism Center
The U.S. Military Academy at West Point opened the Combating Terrorism Center in 2003. Its mission is to help combat terrorist threats in the United States through education, research, and policy analysis.

Central Intelligence Agency
The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is the keystone of the U.S. intelligence community. Its mission consists of supporting the president, the National Security Council, and all who make and execute U.S. national security policy by providing accurate, evidence-based, comprehensive, and timely foreign intelligence related to national security. It also conducts counterintelligence activities, special activities, and other functions related to foreign intelligence and national security as directed by the president.

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff
See Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Congressional Research Service
The Congressional Research Service (CRS) is the public policy research arm of the U.S. Congress. Located within the Library of Congress, CRS provides nonpartisan, objective analyses of issues to members of Congress.

Department of Homeland Security
The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) was established by the Homeland Security Act of 2002. Pursuant to this legislation, the department came into existence on January 24, 2003, and is administered under the supervision and direction of the secretary of homeland security. DHS consolidates functions from twenty-two federal agencies under one umbrella with the single, critical mission of protecting the United States using state-of-the-art intelligence information. The secretary is charged with developing and coordinating a comprehensive national strategy to strengthen the United States against terrorist threats or attacks. In fulfilling this effort, the secretary advises the president on strengthening U.S. borders, providing for intelligence analysis and infrastructure protection, improving the use of science and technology to counter weapons of mass destruction, and creating a comprehensive response and recovery division.

Department of Justice
The central mission of the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) is to enforce the laws of the United States, to prevent and control crime, to seek the punishment of criminals, and to administer the nation’s immigration laws. Among the components of the DOJ are the Civil Rights Division, Criminal Division, Community Relations Service, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Office of the Attorney General, U.S. attorneys, and U.S. marshals.

Department of State
The executive branch and the Congress have constitutional responsibilities for U.S. foreign policy. Within the executive branch, the State Department is the lead U.S. foreign affairs agency, and the secretary of state is the president’s principal foreign policy adviser. The department advances U.S. objectives and worldview through its primary role in developing and implementing the president’s foreign policy. The department also supports the foreign affairs activities of other U.S. government entities including the Commerce Department and AID. It also provides an array of important services to U.S. citizens and to foreigners seeking to visit or immigrate to the United States.

Executive Office of the President

see White House

Government Accountability Office

The Government Accountability Office (GAO), formerly General Accounting Office, is the investigative arm of Congress and is charged with examining all matters relating to the receipt and disbursement of public funds. The GAO was established by the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 to independently audit government agencies. Over the years, Congress has expanded GAO’s audit authority, added new responsibilities and duties, and strengthened GAO’s ability to perform independently.

Supporting Congress is GAO’s fundamental responsibility. In meeting this objective, GAO performs a variety of services, the most prominent of which are audits and evaluations of government programs and activities. The majority of these reviews are made in response to specific congressional requests. Other assignments are initiated pursuant to standing commitments to congressional committees, and some reviews are specifically required by law. Finally, some assignments are independently undertaken in accordance with GAO’s basic legislative responsibilities.

Joint Chiefs of Staff

The Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) consists of the chairman, the vice chairman, the chief of staff of the army, the chief of naval operations, the chief of staff of the air force, and the commandant of the Marine Corps. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is the principal military adviser to the president, the secretary of defense, and the National Security Council. Since the Goldwater-Nichols DoD Reorganization Act of 1986, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has also been identified as the senior ranking member of the armed forces.

Joint Forces Staff College

The Joint Forces Staff College, a component of the National Defense University, educates joint and multinational war fighters to plan and lead at the theater and major joint task force operational level. Military operations increasingly require the armed services to work jointly and JFSC provides students the tools to operate in a joint environment.

National Counterterrorism Center

In August 2004, the president established the National Counterterrorism Center (NCTC) to serve as the primary organization in the United States Government for integrating and analyzing all intelligence pertaining to terrorism and counterterrorism and to conduct strategic operational planning by integrating all instruments of national power. Located at the Liberty Crossing Building in Northern Virginia, the NCTC is a multi-agency organization dedicated to eliminating the terrorist threat to U.S. interests at home and abroad.

Naval Postgraduate School

The Naval Postgraduate School, located in Monterey, California, is an academic institution with an emphasis on study and research programs relevant to the navy’s interests, as well as to the interests of the other arms of the Department of Defense.

Students come from all service branches of the U.S. defense community, as well as from the Coast Guard, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the services of more than twenty-five allied nations. The school provides more than forty programs of study, ranging from the traditional engineering and physical sciences to the rapidly evolving space science programs. The faculty, the majority of whom are civilians, are drawn from a broad range of educational institutions.
Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics

The Office of the Under Secretary of Defense is responsible for the Defense Department’s acquisition, technology, and logistics functions. Not only does it buy weapons, but it also supports the war effort, including logistics of troop movements, and handles the entire technology portfolio of the Defense Department.

Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, U.S. House of Representatives

The Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence holds hearings on intelligence-related activities of the U.S. government and issues recommendations on intelligence appropriations that come before the House of Representatives.

Strategic Studies Institute, U.S. Army War College

The Strategic Studies Institute (SSI) traces its origin to the establishment in 1947 of the Advanced Studies Group by General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, then chief of staff. The initial mission of this group was to develop concepts of national security in light of the revolution in warfare brought about with the onset of the atomic age. The group was elevated to the joint level with the creation of the DoD.

When the Army War College was reestablished in 1950, an Advanced Studies Group was chartered to consider strategy and land power. The group evolved into the Advanced Studies and Doctrine Division within the faculty of the college. As part of an army-wide reorganization in 1962, the division became the U.S. Army Combat Developments Command Institute of Advanced Studies, addressing strategic questions as well as those of organizing, equipping, and preparing the army to fight. The mission became exclusively strategic in 1971, and the institute received its present name.

Another army reorganization in 1973 brought both the U.S. Army War College and SSI under the deputy chief of staff for operations and plans, and SSI became a War College department. SSI continues to provide an analytical capability within the army to address strategic and other issues to support army participation in national security policy formulation.

U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command

The U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) operates thirty-two schools at fifteen army installations. The schools include: Adjutant General, Command and General Staff College, Army War College, Logistics Management College, Warrant Officer Career Center, and School of Advanced Military Studies. The mission of TRADOC is to train and educate the army's soldiers, to develop the army's leaders, and to establish doctrine and standards for the army.

U.S. Army War College

The mission of the U.S. Army War College (USAWC) is to prepare selected military, civilian, and international leaders to assume strategic responsibilities in military and national security organizations; to educate students about the employment of the U.S. Army as part of a unified, joint, or multinational force in support of national military strategy; to research operational and strategic issues; and to conduct outreach programs that benefit the USAWC, the U.S. Army, and the nation.

U.S. Military Academy

Since its founding two centuries ago, the U.S. Military Academy has accomplished its mission by developing cadets in four critical areas: intellectual, physical, military, and moral-ethical—a four-year process called the “West Point Experience.” The mission of the U.S. Military Academy is “to educate, train, and inspire the Corps of Cadets so that each graduate is a commissioned leader of character committed to the values of Duty, Honor, Country and prepared for a career of professional excellence and service to the Nation as an officer in the United States Army.”

U.S. House of Representatives

The U.S. House of Representatives is the lower house of the United States Congress. It comprises 435 members who are elected by state residents. The number of representatives from each state is based on that state’s proportion of the U.S. population. The House has exclusive powers within the bicameral legislature to initiate revenue bills, impeach officials, and elect the president when the Electoral College is deadlocked.

U.S. Senate

The U.S. Senate is the upper house of the United States Congress. It consists of one hundred members, two elected from each of the fifty states. The Senate has exclusive powers within the bicameral legislature to ratify treaties, confirm presidential appointments, and hold impeachment trials of officials.

White House

The White House, or the Executive Office of the President, includes the Council of Economic Advisors, National Security Council, Office of the United States Trade Representative, Office of Management and Budget, National Economic Council, White House Military Office, and Council on Environmental Quality.
