This rich collection of U.S. government records documents nuclear nonproliferation policy during a formative period. It traces the creation of the major institutions and agreements that make up the international nonproliferation system, including the International Atomic Energy Agency, the first iteration of the IAEA safeguards system and the negotiation of the Nonproliferation Treaty.

The collection also details the U.S. government’s concern about emerging nuclear weapons states—the “Nth Country Problem”—and its efforts to monitor nuclear activities in China, France, India, Israel and elsewhere. Another important topic explored is the diplomatic effort to find a nuclear role within NATO for West Germany to deter possible German interest in an independent weapons capability. Solving that problem was essential to the breakthrough in the NPT negotiations during 1966-1967.

Since the overthrow of the U.S.-backed Shah and the subsequent hostage crisis in 1979, Iran has been widely considered a pariah state and a major foreign policy challenge for the United States. Yet, every American president since then has sought to establish ties with the Islamic Republic. This collection traces the arc of this unusual relationship from its darkest points to the signing of the controversial nuclear accord in 2015. The continuing relevance of U.S.-Iran relations and the issues explored here will make this set a vital resource for scholars and students for the foreseeable future.
